BRTC Named a "2015 Great College to Work For"

Black River Technical College is one of the best colleges in the nation to work for, according to a new survey by The Chronicle of Higher Education, the nation's best source of news about colleges and universities.

The results, released in The Chronicle's eighth annual report on the Academic Workplace, are based on a survey of 281 colleges and universities.

In all, only 86 of the 281 institutions achieved "Great College to Work For" recognition for specific best practices and policies. Results are reported for small, medium, and large institutions with Black River Technical College included among the universities and colleges with 2,999 students or fewer.

Black River Technical College won honors in following 3 categories: Work-Life Balance, Supervisor/Department Chair Relationship, and Confidence in Senior Leadership.

Even more impressive, BRTC was the only 2-year college in Arkansas to receive the honor and, with John Brown University, was 1 of 2 Arkansas institutions to achieve the honor.

"This is a very satisfying affirmation of Black River Technical College, but our real goal is not recognition – it's being a community that values the needs and contributions of every individual. In that sense everyone at BRTC helps to make this a great place to work," said Dr. Eric Turner, BRTC President.

"The institutions that the Great Colleges program recognizes provide innovative educational experiences – while also offering their employees outstanding workplace experiences – and we are eager to help readers learn more about them," said Liz McMillen, The Chronicle's editor.

The survey results are based on a two-part assessment process: an institutional audit that captured demographics and workplace policies from each institution, and a survey administered to faculty, administrators, and professional support staff. The primary factor in deciding whether an institution received recognition was the employee feedback.

The Chronicle worked with ModernThink LLC to administer the survey and analyze the results. Great Colleges to Work For is one of the largest and most respected workplace-recognition programs in the country.

"Carolyn brings a tremendous amount of knowledge and experience to the Board of Trustees," said President Dr. Eric Turner. "We are fortunate she graciously agreed to serve. Her genuine interest BRTC's success will be an asset to our college and we are pleased to be working with her."

Interpretive Panels Installed at REACH

In 2013 BRTC was awarded a grant from the Arkansas Natural and Cultural Resources Council which included the installation of interpretive panels at both the Rice-Upshaw site as well as the William Looney Tavern. These panels explore many topics including trade at Reuben Rice's, farming in Davidson Township, and various skilled craftsmen in the area.

An interpretive panel at the William Looney Tavern.

The panels at the William Looney Tavern still can only be seen during open hours since the tavern is located on private property.

The REACH sites will be open for tours Saturday, August 15th from 9:00 a.m. to noon. A donation of $3.00 per person ages five and older which includes a tour of both the historic Rice-Upshaw site and the Looney Tavern. Admission is free for children under the age of five.

Groups Invited to Schedule "Opening Hearts and Minds" Presentations

The Task Force for "Cultural Connections: Opening Hearts and Minds in Rural Northeast Arkansas" will offer a series of presentations for civic, governmental, social, and church groups across Randolph, Clay, and Lawrence counties this fall. Several have been tentatively scheduled, beginning in September.

These community-wide presentations are designed to provide factual information that responds to such questions as "What is the net cost and the economic impact of immigrants?" "How do immigrants contribute to Arkansas's workforce?" The presentations will also focus on such topics as citizenship and language challenges and the impact of the state's immigrants on education, housing, and health care.

The presentations were discussed at a Task Force meeting held July 21 on the BRTC campus. The Task Force includes a group of approximately 25 local community leaders who are committed to a community that is open and welcoming to the anticipated non-native workers who may come to this region as a result of new area jobs.

A highlight of last week's meeting was a presentation "What's In A Word?" by BRTC President Dr. Eric Turner who, using the book of James as text, discussed the human tendency to use words in harmful and negative ways. Turner also expressed his early and ongoing support of the efforts of the "Opening Hearts and Minds" project. He emphasized the responsibility and the opportunity for the college to be a leading positive force in this aspect of community growth.

The Task Force is a sub-committee of the Northeast Arkansas Intermodal Facilities Authority. Its activities are supported by BRTC and are funded in part by the BRTC Foundation, the Arkansas Humanities Council, and the National Endowment for the Humanities. Its purpose is to encourage and support the community's efforts to be an open, welcoming environment for its citizens.

Presentations will be based in part on a series of reports commissioned by the Winthrop Rockefeller Foundation, titled A Profile of Immigrants in Arkansas. "None of us are experts," noted Ziegler. "We don't pretend to be. But we are trying to learn as much as we can about the changes that are coming, and that includes gaining a better understanding about the newcomers—the immigrants—who may come to our region as a part of our workforce."

Task Force members also received their copies of a book, Enrique's Journey, which will be the topic of readings and discussions in the spring. The "Opening Hearts and Minds" project will culminate with a visit and two public presentations by the book's Pulitzer Prize-winning author, Sonia Nazario, April 7, 2016.

The Task Force is also accepting the names of prospective community reading groups from junior high age and older with plans to hold "community reads" sessions prior to the author's visit. Groups can choose to read all or part of the regular version of the non-fiction book, a "Young Adult" version, or a Spanish language version. These reading sessions will also be facilitated by members of the Task Force and its Team Leaders.

For more information about the project and the presentation options, contact BRTC's Office of Corporate and Community Education (870-248-4180), or email Ziegler at janz@blackrivertech.edu.
